

singing workshop with emily smith

Saturday 24th September

St. Margaret's Hall, Forfar

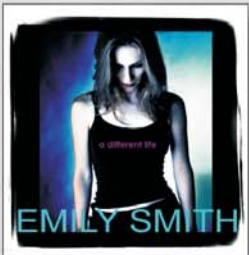

10am - 4.30pm

(Registration from 9.30am)

£12 (£10 concession)

Dumfriesshire-born singer Emily Smith first made her mark on the Scottish music scene when she won the 2002 BBC Radio Scotland's Young Scottish Traditional Musician of the Year Award. She studied at the Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama, developing her skills on piano and accordion and established her own singing style, and graduated with an Honours degree in Scottish music in 2003. Her voice blends delicacy with surprising power and is equally alluring whether enriched by instrumental backing or unaccompanied; with an imaginative approach to instrumental arrangements she gives a contemporary edge to ancient songs. As well as performing with her band, which has toured throughout Europe and Australasia, Emily has worked with performers such as Steve Byrne, John McCusker, Karine Polwart and Irish band North Cregg, and has been included in the acclaimed 'Scottish Women' group featuring Scotland's top female vocalists. Emily's debut CD 'A Day Like Today' was released in 2002, and her long-awaited second album 'A Different Life' was released in January 2005.

To book a place, please call Alison Roberts on 01382 858541

www.emilysmith.org

Workshop Organised By ANGLES FOLK